OUR VISION

Diasporas are able to contribute effectively in Australia and abroad to peace, development, humanitarian response and human rights.

OUR MISSION

Diaspora Action Australia works with diasporas in Australia that promote peace, development, humanitarian response and human rights.

We do this by: supporting diaspora initiatives; providing resources, information and training; facilitating dialogue and shared learning; building networks; amplifying diaspora voices at local, national and international levels.

We advocate for the inclusion of diasporas in policy dialogue relating to their countries of origin and communities, and seek to build an environment in which diaspora contributions are recognised and valued.

STRATEGIC GOALS

Our strategic goals describe the world we want to see by the end of 2019.

Goal One

Diaspora communities and organisations have the capacity and voice to achieve their goals for peace, development, humanitarian response and human rights.

DAA will work towards this by:

- Building capacity of diaspora organisations and helping them to achieve their goals. We will particularly facilitate opportunities for women and youth to lead change.
- Forging relationships between diaspora communities, other sectors and the Australian public.

Goal Two

Diaspora communities and organisations are recognised as critical stakeholders and partners in policy and program development and delivery.

DAA will work towards this by:

- Building networks and sharing knowledge, particularly through growing the Diaspora Learning Network.
- Raising awareness about diaspora contributions to peace, development, humanitarian response and human rights and promoting collaboration among a range of stakeholders including government, NGOs, universities, the media and others.

Goal Three

Diaspora Action Australia is viable, sustainable and able to grow.

DAA will work towards this by:

- Investing in our people.
- Strengthening our governance and working towards continuous improvement.
- Securing sustainable funding.

When Diaspora Action Australia (DAA) was founded in 2008, the term “diaspora” was rarely heard. A lot has changed since then with talk of diasporas cropping up in the news and in everyday conversations. This is a welcome development for us and the communities we work with. It means that more and more people and institutions are recognising that refugee and migrant communities have an important connection with their countries of origin, and that these linkages benefit Australia too.

We believe we have made an important contribution to this change by highlighting the role that diasporas play in the areas of development, peacebuilding, human rights and humanitarian response, while at the same time strengthening their communities locally in Australia.

This increased recognition was evident in the success of our conference in September 2016 that brought diasporas together for peace, development and humanitarian response. Spearheaded by DAA, in conjunction with the University of Melbourne and a group of dedicated agencies under the Diaspora Learning Network, this conference took a significant step to bring diasporas, government, humanitarian organisations and academics together.

Denise Cauchi,
Executive Director

For the first time in Australia, it was clear that the work of diaspora organisations is now on the map.

Buoyed by the energy and enthusiasm found through the conference, the Diaspora Learning Network continues to take this message forward and promote the important role diasporas play.

Of course, DAA continues to support the work of individual communities and organisations, through our mentoring and training program, which this year extended to regional Victoria. We also showcased their successes with a vibrant event held in Flinders Street Station on World Refugee Day, which gave Victorians a taste of the talents of our colleagues and friends.

After seven great years in Ross House, DAA moved to Collingwood, where we now share an office with our new partners the Refugee Council of Australia. This has led to further collaboration between our two organisations and a very vibrant workplace.

In 2016, DAA also released its new strategic plan that will guide our work over the next three years. While we continue to juggle the resourcing challenges of being a small organisation with a big mission, we look forward to finding the solutions we need with a little help from our friends, colleagues, volunteers and diaspora partners.

Diaspora Conference Breaks New Ground

The Diasporas in Action conference in September 2016, marked a turning point in how aid and development thought leaders consider the role of diasporas in peacebuilding and humanitarian response.

For the first time in Australia, participants gathered at the University of Melbourne to hear about bold and unique approaches to peacebuilding; private sector investment in conflict-affected countries; international experiences of national diaspora action plans; contestation of authoritarian regimes; use of communications technology for development; and importantly strategies to maximise diaspora contribution after natural disasters.

Spearheaded by DAA in partnership with the University of Melbourne Refugee Studies Program, the conference was supported by the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade and convened by the Diaspora Learning Network, including ACFID, Oxfam Australia, Refugee Council of Australia, Australian Red Cross and Research for Development Impact Network.

In her opening address, the Minister for International Development and the Pacific Concetta Fierravanti-Wells underscored the importance of diasporas. "I am committed to working with diaspora communities so that they benefit from the Government's aid expertise and in turn, that the Government benefits from diasporas' local knowledge," she said.

Nawal El-Gack

It had the hallmarks of a successful conference, with stimulating presentations with international experts, a strong cohort of attendance, and importantly a palpable buzz in the air, and a sense of excitement that something new was happening.

The 170 participants represented a unique breadth of sectors and backgrounds that there was no place for business as usual. Academics rubbed shoulders with artists. International development practitioners explored collaboration with diaspora organisations. Government representatives discussed risk with diaspora business councils.

Community sector organisations met young diaspora entrepreneurs and conversations were lively and engaged. Two separate participants commented that it was the friendliest conference they had been to. An important starting ground for connections to be made.

"We are very grateful for this first step and we are hoping that this diaspora movement will grow and gain more prominence particularly in the eyes of the Australian government."

Jeremy Liyanage, Director, Bridging Lanka

For diasporas, it was clear that they were not alone and that there are many other communities in Australia tackling the same issues.

For the government and non-government international development agencies, there were international examples to look to, demonstrating how the sector can engage meaningfully with diasporas to enhance development and humanitarian outcomes.

For refugee settlement and community sector organisations, it was clear that Australia's multicultural communities not only help people to settle, but are also connecting Australians with the rest of the world.

Since the conference there has been a notable increase in interest from a range of stakeholders in keeping up a multi-sector dialogue on these issues live. The Diaspora Learning Network has continued, with DAA as its secretariat, and a second conference is planned for 2018. For more information on DLN, see p. 14

"The first step in successful collaboration is to understand one another's experiences and learn from them. [When] the role diasporas play is more widely understood and accepted, [then] business as usual is no longer an option."

Commemorating Loss, Celebrating Resilience and Culture

On World Refugee Day in June 2017, DAA hosted “My Journey, My Home” at Flinders Street Station in the Melbourne CBD to celebrate the cultures and journeys of diaspora communities.

Using dance, music, storytelling, short films, videos and silent dramas, diaspora communities raised awareness of the impact of conflicts in their countries of origin, and of their process of seeking safety.

Throughout the course of the day, members of the Sri Lankan, Oromo, Darfuri, Nuba Mountains (Sudan), Hazara, South Sudanese, Middle Eastern (Iraq, Syria, Lebanon and Egypt) diasporas presented 15 performances to some 700 commuters through the station.

The Darfur community transitioned from dances to a silent drama that portrayed the violence and persecution in Sudan that brought them here to Australia. Their performances set a double edge of both celebration and mourning of their journey and home. For many commuters who stopped to watch, their interactions with the performers were the first time they had heard of these conflicts or met members of the different communities in Australia. One member of the audience watching the Darfuri silent drama commented on the beauty and importance of the performances.

“I felt unity, I saw so much love and so much hope and joy, it was amazing, and I loved it.”

“Their stories - through creativity and creative expression - need to be told and people need to understand and hear because that’s what gives us compassion and understanding and empathy”.

Another commuter, who initially expressed negative impressions about refugees, talked with some of the participants and left shaking the hand of a Darfuri performer, saying “I’m glad you’re here, mate”.

“My Journey, My home” was part of the Refugee Council of Australia’s Refugee Week events to mark the United Nations’ (UN) World Refugee Day that honours the courage, strength and determination of women, men and children forced to flee their homelands under threat of persecution, conflict and violence.

We thank Gandel Philanthropy for their support of this event.

“I am really very happy to be in a country like Australia because there is nothing better than multiculturalism ... we all have to recognise and to understand that the world is for all of us.”

Building Capacity

DAA works with diaspora communities and organisations to increase their capacity to work in Australia and overseas.

WORKSHOPS

We delivered eleven workshops in Melbourne and Dandenong and two regional workshops reaching a total of 106 people.

Support from the Victorian Multicultural Commission and the City of Melbourne was provided for Melbourne workshops focusing on communicating and connecting to the wider community and building stronger, and more sustainable diaspora organisations.

On top of this a series workshops in Dandenong focused on building the advocacy capacity of Hazara women and their knowledge of human rights and democracy. These workshops were supported by the City of Greater Dandenong.

A further 68 people from the Sri Lankan, Oromo, Nuba Mountains, South Sudanese, Afghan, Tibetan, Hazara, Darfur, Vietnamese and Thai diaspora communities attended 11 workshops building their skills to speak out publicly. This effort directly saw three of the organisations present at the Diaspora Learning Network Conference in September.

We completed the two remaining regional workshops in Mildura and Bendigo with support from the Office of Multicultural Affairs and Citizenship [OMAC], and 38 people from the Hazara, Burundi, Karen, South Sudanese, Vietnamese and Malaysian diaspora communities attended these sessions.

As a direct result of the regional workshops a request was received from the Loddon Campaspe Multicultural Services to mentor two Karen organisations.

MENTORING PROGRAM

DAA furthered its mentoring of diaspora organisations. With Gandel Philanthropy's support we worked with Karen Organisation of Bendigo and the Karen Cultural and Social Support Foundation (KCSSF) to design and implement a tailored program.

With this training and support, these organisations are now working towards new initiatives including introducing Karen New Year to Bendigo and establishing a medical centre on the Thai-Myanmar border.

DAA also supported Darfur Humanitarian Advocacy Australia to develop briefings on the continuing conflict in Darfur and arrange meetings with Government. The delegation visited Canberra to build support to contain the conflict and in March 2017, the delegation met with the Foreign Minister Julie Bishop.

We worked with the Nuba Mountains International Association – Victoria advocate to the New Zealand Government on the 'Unknown War' and asked them to use their seat on the UN Security Council to take their message to end the war and humanitarian crisis in South Kordofan and Blue Nile States Sudan.

With this mentorship, the Oromo and Ogaden community leaders have worked towards a new Horn of Africa alliance and Hazara women met with the Member for Dandenong in November in her office to discuss the many issues that impacted on them including discrimination in the community.

REGIONAL REACH

Bendigo is home to Victorians of many nationalities and ethnic backgrounds. Since late 2016, Diaspora Action Australia has mentored two Karen-Burmese communities in Bendigo, expanding DAA services to communities in regional Victoria for the first time.

Through regular mentoring sessions, DAA has worked with 24 members of the two groups to develop the essential skills needed to improve the governance and management of their organisations, build networks and enhance influence within their community.

"We work very hard but the legal part is one of our weaknesses and these courses have helped us improve on that," said Sei Sei Mu Thein the President of the Karen Organisation of Bendigo.

The Karen-Burmese community in Bendigo has hundreds of members where they support the Karen and Burmese people to retain traditions and integrate into their local community. As the organisations aim to assist their communities in Myanmar, DAA's support has included furthering international projects.

We would like to thank Gandel Philanthropy and the Office of Multicultural Affairs and Citizenship for their support of this project.

Promoting Learning and Awareness

As the only organisation in Australia specialising in supporting diaspora work on peace-building, development, humanitarian response and human rights, DAA has been at the forefront of advocating for diasporas to have a seat at the table in policy discussions relating to their countries of origin. This is now having a noticeable effect as the Australian Government, international development agencies and universities are gaining interest in the work of diaspora organisations and increasingly seek DAA's advice on how best to engage them. As one of our key goals is to link diasporas with these stakeholders, we welcome this development.

DAA brokers public speaking opportunities for diaspora partners. In 2016 this included creating presentation and radio interview opportunities for leaders from the Sri Lankan, Hazara and South Sudanese communities.

We have also delivered presentations in conferences and seminars on different aspects of diaspora work, including:

- University of Queensland Asia Pacific Centre for the Responsibility to Protect: Advancing Gender, Peace and Security in the ASEAN Region;
- University of Melbourne: Justice, Conflict, Responsibility Symposium;
- Monash University: Realising Women, Peace & Security in Asia-Pacific.
- Deakin University, Centre for Humanitarian Leadership: Asia Pacific Humanitarian Leadership Conference.

“I’d like to commend the [Diaspora Learning] Network for organising this conference. I think it’s really important that we start to formally to talk about the work that diasporas do.”

Minister for International Development and the Pacific, Concetta Fierravanti-Wells.

As a member of the Australian Government’s Advisory Group on Australia Africa Relations, Executive Director Denise Cauchi directly promotes the inclusion of African diasporas on policy matters. She is also a member of the Board of the Australian Council for International Development.

DIASPORA LEARNING NETWORK

The Diasporas in Action conference not only put diaspora activity on a public stage, but it was also convened by a group of agencies who formed a new committed network. Buoyed by the success of the conference, the network has continued to promote collaboration and learning on the role of diasporas in peace, development and humanitarian response.

With DAA acting as the Secretariat, the DLN currently comprises ACFID, Oxfam Australia, Australian Red Cross, Research for Development Impact Network, Refugee Council of Australia and academics from University of Melbourne, and Australian Catholic University.

One of the DLN's first activities was to provide a submission to the Foreign Policy White Paper consultation. Over the next year the network will be increase its membership, run seminars and produce a series of papers that provide recommendations to government and others stakeholders.

A second conference is planned for 2018.

ABOUT US

Our Volunteers

YAZMIN GONZALES

Volunteering with Diaspora Action Australia since 2012, Yazmin Gonzales is a core member of the Community Engagement Team.

She has a Masters in Community Development and brings a wealth of experience from working with NGOs in Mexico. Through Diaspora Action Australia, Yazmin says she has witnessed significant growth in activists' capacity and advocacy work.

"Diaspora Action Australia has been a great way to meet like-minded people."

Yazmin is now an Australian resident and working at the McKillop Family Services.

JOEL KHEMIS MUSA

Joel Khemis Musa is a member of the Community Engagement Team with strong passion for creating thriving communities, locally and abroad.

Joel is a youth worker and studies Community Development at Victoria University. He values the opportunity to work alongside communities with lived experience of war and conflict, and work towards a career with the United Nations.

MUSTAFA NAJIB

Mustafa Najib is a committed Board member. Originally from Afghanistan, Mustafa has been working with Diaspora Action Australia for over one year.

"DAA's work builds bridges between diaspora communities and builds shared understanding." - Mustafa said.

"It's provided us an opportunity to engage with the community and find solutions to world issues."

LULU JEMIMAH

Lulu Jemimah managed communications during her time at Diaspora Action Australia before returning to Uganda in 2017.

Lulu notes the impact volunteering had on her professional pursuits.

"I felt constantly motivated about the work that DAA does. It was great to work with like-minded people and improve my skillset along the way."

MANUELA RUHSTALLER

Manuela has a strong passion for international relations and joined Diaspora Action Australia in 2015 after moving from Switzerland to finish her Masters Degree.

When asked her favourite thing about being a volunteer, she notes the contribution it plays in bringing the world one step closer to peace.

"It's hard to measure progress, but you begin to see the impact that DAA has. You see communities become hopeful and that's what leads to progress."
